Lily and her piggies loved to play together in the garden. They would run and jump and chase each other, and Lily would often pretend that they were flying through the sky. But one day, Lily's parents told her that it was time for Percy and Penelope to go back to the forest. They were wild animals, they said, and they needed to be free.

Lily was heartbroken. She didn't want to lose her piggies, but she knew that they couldn't stay with her forever. So, she made a promise to them that she would visit them every day and that they would always be her best friends.

The next day, Lily took Percy and Penelope back to the forest. She hugged them tightly and told them how much she loved them. Then, she watched as they ran off into the trees. Lily was sad to see them go, but she knew that they were where they belonged.

Lily visited Percy and Penelope every day after that. She would play with them and feed them, and they would always be happy to see her. One day, Lily was playing with Percy and Penelope when she saw something amazing. The piggies were flapping their wings and trying to fly! Lily was so excited. She cheered them on and watched as they soared through the air. Percy and Penelope were finally flying!

Lily was so happy for her piggies. She knew that they had always dreamed of flying, and now their dream had come true. Lily watched as they flew higher and higher, until they were just two little dots in the sky. Then, she turned and walked away, knowing that her piggies would always be with her, even though they were now flying free.
